

The City of Houston to Make Menstrual Products More Accessible

The City of Houston is taking a proactive step by expanding access to menstrual care products at over 30 of its city-run buildings.

The city buildings will include multi-service centers and other places where Houston Health Department provides services for the most vulnerable groups. Council Member Abbie Kamin originally introduced the proposal as an amendment to the FY 2024 budget.

This amendment was withdrawn after Mayor Sylvester Turner agreed to have Houston Health Department work out the logistics to implement the plan.

Implementation of this plan is expected to start within a few months. Click here to read the whole article.
